

Slideware Prototype Part 2 Finish and Test

Tasks:

1. You are interested in ordering a moon shaped pizza with pepperoni. Starting from the main page, create your pizza order.
2. You are interested in getting a 16" diamond shaped spinach pizza delivered to you and want to pay with a gift card. Starting from the main page, complete your order.

The theme that I chose was that the pizza place offered crazy shapes. The user chooses the shape of the pizza that they want before they can customize the rest of the pizza. The way that this impacts tasks is that the user cannot move on unless they pick the shape. The tasks let a user create a pizza from scratch and to place an order for a pizza starting at the home screen.

Prototype interaction photos

Task 1: You are interested in ordering a moon shaped pizza with pepperoni for carryout with a cash payment.

The main revisions that I made:

- Changing the main customization options into drop down menus.
- Adding a “highlight” to the selected choices in the size menu, as well as 2 functioning checkboxes under the toppings drop down menu.
- Adding slides for the Checkout screens so that the fields for gift card number and credit card information do not appear until the radio button corresponding to choice is clicked.
- A previous button added so that a user does not have to start back at the home screen if they made a mistake.
- On slides where there are radio buttons and no previous button, if the selected radio button is clicked again, then it acts as a previous button.

The design patterns included so far are:

- radio button choices
- checkboxes
- drop-down lists
- text entry

- action buttons / links

One thing that I have learned from my self-walkthrough was that I did not have a way for a user to go back to a previous screen if they made a mistake. I had the restaurant's logo in the upper left corner of each screen that links to the home screen for if a user wanted to quit the whole process but there was no other way of just correcting a single step. Another thing that I learned was that you should pay attention to which where links of a single element goes. Some of the clickable links would go to the right slide but others on that same slide would act as a link to a different option. Going through the walkthrough with those tasks helped to double check if the right slides were showing at the right times.
